

Progress Report

A report on the second day's events at Tulsa, where the Rev. Billy James Hargis is running his "Anti-Communist Leadership School." The basic proposals for the fight against communism are taking shape down there.

How to stop the Communists? "Stop the liberal Harvard program in Washington," Billy James said Tuesday.

Who is the enemy? "I'm not interested in Goldwater in 1964. I'm interested in Kennedy in 1962," Billy James said.

Who can fight the Reds best? Arkansas Governor Orval Faubus "thinks right on the anti-Communist fight," accord to Billy James. So Orval should run against William Fulbright for the Arkansas Senate spot this year.

Of course, not all the time was spent attacking the President, the "Harvard liberals," or Sen. Fulbright. The main speaker, Prof. R. P. Oliver, of the University of Illinois, got right down to the business of pointing out the actual Reds. There is a "general campaign to stamp out resistance to the Communist conspiracy within our borders," the professor said. Further, "traitors have entrenched themselves" in the Defense Department, and the Central Intelligence Agency and the National Security Agency are "thoroughly infiltrated" with Communist sympathizers, he said. This leaves practically no one to trust, but that is the professor's problem, not ours.

The answer to spreading communism, according to Billy James, is to elect conservatives this year and gain control of Congress.

Somehow comment seems superfluous.
